What is MCI Screening Test?

Every student having a degree from MCI recognized medical university from abroad need to give a licensing test (unlike those who pass from India) which is named as FMGE exam or a MCI Screening Test. The MCI screening test for foreign medical graduates is conducted annually twice in June and December. The students return back on completion of MBBS course in the month of June every year and generally go through the crash course for MCI screening test up to September. They prepare from the next 2 months on their own and give their first attempt in December. It is not enough to pass 19 subjects of MBBS!

MCI Screening Passing Ratio

MCI screening test 2016 is scheduled in June. As one can easily see that the MCI screening test result has been low constantly for the last 4-5 years with an average of around 15% of the students passing the exam in spite of this being just a non-competitive screening test. If you are thinking to study MBBS abroad, you must keep FMGE result of the past years very well in mind to ensure a right decision is taken right from the beginning. Are these MCI screening test question papers very difficult or the students are not clear about the approach to crack the exams? Not if you have prepared for 6 Years!

MOKSH aims to achieve 100% results of its students in the coming 5 years through an innovative solution.

Just getting an Indian perspective of MBBS with 19 subjects taught over On-Line is not enough. At the age of 18 years, going abroad for the first time in their life, they have many other distractions leading to very low chances of preparing for the FMGE.
